A shadow can show an object's shape, but it cannot show colors or details (like a smile or a frown). Place small toys or objects in the sun and place a paper underneath it. Try and trace the shadows of their toys

Shadow Play (Eve Duncan, #19) by Iris Johansen - An enjoyable read but not a book that bowled me over. I loved Joseph O'Connor's Star of the Sea and Ghost Light and was really excited to pick up a Hard Copy of Shadowplay. I was aware that while the novel is based real events surrounding the lives of Bram Stoker (author of Dracula) Victorian actor-manager Henry Irving and leading actress of the day Ellen Terry, but many liberties had been ...

Shadow Play by Jill Ramsower - Books on Google Play - The novel - 'based on real events but a work of fiction', as O'Connor describes it - is somewhat slow to get going, indeed it is only when Stoker and his wife arrive in London that it really sinks its teeth into you (sorry). The reason is that while Stoker is the protagonist, the book's dynamo is the extraordinarily charismatic and volatile Irving. Wed, 18 Nov 2020 00:01:00 GMT
