Vanishing Points: I Beach Huts, Milford, 1930 These are a series of three sonnets which look at different episodes from my family's life. The first begins with a photograph taken at Milford-on-Sea, in the 1930s, where a mother and a father and their two boys are sitting on the beach, and it imagines what happens later in life. Fri, 16 Oct

Vanishing Points: I Beach Huts, Milford, 1930 - Poetry Archive - Vanishing point, well like a magician, I will return from a girl completely invisible, Move along now, take your hypocrisy, make some other girl seemingly miserable, One day someone, will make you feel, that you have reached the vanishing parallel, When or where, is anyone's guess, but I am sure that your hypocrisy it will thus quell. Wed,

Weiner - Poem Hunter - Poetry, Tallit, and Vanishing Points!
Reading and Writing. ... This week, Iviva introduced the concept of point perspective and the vanishing point, an imaginary point in the distance of a landscape where lines converge.
Iviva explained that our eyes perceive the vanishing point, but that it doesn't actually exist, and that the two sides of a ...
